

Balls and Legs - Bouncy/Playful/Fun portraits by Matt Jones 2019

Acrylic on canvas.

This series of works marks the artist's move from digital illustration to the solidity of plastic arts. Dancing, playing, floating, sweet and angry human legs convey colourful planets through black space embodying a kind of bouncy ball game. This graphic reduction to a variable combination of two elements wrapped up in an unexpected colour chart opens the door to a range of readings, from childhood dreams to deep personal feelings.

The genderless figures interact and get intimate with each other, causing overlapping spheres to change colour. Some of them collide, some bounce off each other, some drift in space and some are floating by on their own through the endlessness of space and time. Their interaction creates a narrative of renewal, recreation and confidence.
